In this informative presentation, Jonathan shares how to create award-winning images by capturing scenes and sights the moment they happen.

Jonathan Lucas Auch was born in New York City in 1984. He studied painting at the Art Center College of Design in Pasadena California. Upon returning to New York City, and training as darkroom printer, Jonathan worked for 3 years as the exhibition printer and assistant for photojournalist James Nachtwey, where he was responsible for all print production used in exhibits, periodicals, galleries and museums. Jonathan also worked as the assistant to Bruce Gilden.

As a freelance photographer, Jonathan works both on the street and producing photo/video reportage on a variety of stories which focus on political, cultural and emotional isolation, alienation, loneliness, racism and discrimination. To see some of Jonathan's work go to <http://jonathanauch.com/>.
