FREE and OPEN TO THE PUBLIC

Pulitzer Prize winner, Nick Ut, will present his program “From Hell to Hollywood” at the Delaware Photographic Society at 7:30pm on Monday, February 26. The presentation will be at Cokesbury Village, 726 Loveville Road, Hockessin, DE 19707 and is free and open to the public.

Nick’s presentation will explore his life works, including the iconic image of the Vietnam War “Napalm Girl” which was named “World Press Photo of the Year 1972.” It was also awarded the Pulitzer Prize in 1973, and received many other top photojournalism awards.

Nick will tell how he got involved in war photography as a 16-year-old and spent a decade covering conflicts in Vietnam, Cambodia, and Laos; then the war zone in North and South Korea. He ended up in southern California covering wild fires, riots, earthquakes, the Rodney King troubles, the O.J. Simpson case, Hollywood celebrities, the Olympics, and the Pope. Nick spent 51 years with the Associated Press.
